FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

FHA Approves Authentisign

Federal Housing Authority to Accept Authentisign for third party document signing

AUSTIN, TX – April 14th, 2010 – On April 8th, the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) issued an official letter stating that the FHA will now accept third party documents e-signed with ESIGN compliant e-signature tools, such as Authentisign.

The letter states "...that FHA will accept electronic signatures on third party documents included in the case binder for mortgage insurance endorsement...Third party documents are those that are originated and signed outside of the mortgagee's control, such as a sales contract." The FHA letter can be found here:

This means that real estate professionals can use Authentisign to gather signatures on real estate contracts and buyers can use those e-signed documents when applying for FHA insurance.

Authentisign is an easy to use, online ESIGN compliant electronic signature application designed exclusively for the real estate industry. Authentisign requires no special hardware or software to use. Authentisign lets agents and brokers easily prepare and distribute paperless, electronic signing packets for their buyers and sellers. Any PDF can be loaded into Authentisign for signing and Authentisign is deeply integrated with the Instanet Solutions suite of online applications that includes InstanetForms, DocBox, TransactionDesk, DocBox2Go, TransactionDesk and InstanetFax.

The use and acceptance of e-signatures is quickly growing in the real estate industry. The Montana Association of REALTORS® recently became the first state association of REALTORS® to commit to providing a digital signature service to all its members. The Montana Association of REALTORS® has signed an agreement with Instanet Solutions that will enable it to provide Authentisign to all its members as a member benefit.
